

Group Confidentiality Form

As you join a group at Millennium Counseling Center (MCC), we ask that you respect the confidentiality of your fellow group members and know they have also pledged to maintain the same for you. We ask that you share information only about yourself and your experience when speaking outside the group. Please be careful not to have conversations about the group in any public areas, especially the MCC waiting room, hallways, restrooms or in front of our building.

You have been placed in a weekly group and regular attendance is essential. If you are unable to attend a scheduled group meeting, please notify your therapist as soon as possible. When in group, please speak for yourself, use "I" language and avoid statements using the third person.

Please give your group therapist at least two weeks' prior notice before you leave the group. We will need to process your leaving in a way that protects you and your fellow group members.

I, as a client, recognize that MCC does not control nor are they responsible for statements made by other clients.

I agree to hold MCC harmless for any breach of confidentiality by another client. I understand that every client has the right to confidentiality and agree that I will not share any information about another client nor will I identify them as a client of MCC.
